NIH Library Resource Training

Course Descriptions

EndNote Basics

Let librarians show you how to use EndNote software to perform searches, capture references and convert them to records in a personal, searchable database. Then learn to select references and format them for your papers using specific journal styles.

Library Skills

Learn to navigate and use the NIH Library's in-house and online resources. Research and lab assistants, support staff, and new NIH Library users, this class is for you.

PubMed

PubMed is the National Library of Medicine's (NLM) web interface to the Medline database. Use PubMed to find references to journal articles in the medical and health sciences. In this class you learn the basic features of searching PubMed including ordering articles online.

Reference Manager

Reference Manager software allows you to electronically manage your reference files. Learn how to link to references in your Reference Manager library when writing papers and automatically format papers to meet the requirements of various publications.

Scopus

Scopus is an interdisciplinary, bibliographic database that indexes the contents of more than 15,000 journals in the physical sciences, engineering, earth and environmental sciences, life and health sciences, social sciences, psychology, business, and management. Scopus content includes Medline and Embase citations. Learn how to search Scopus to identify articles of interest; perform cited reference searches, store searches and create subject, author or cited reference email alerts.
